2. PROGRAMME THEME

In the evolving governance landscape, Government officials are expected to perform efficiently, uphold integrity, and ensure transparency in public service delivery. However, increasing complexities in governance, public scrutiny, and the need for ethical decision-making demand continuous skill enhancement and awareness. This program addresses these needs by equipping officers with modern administrative and managerial competencies, reinforcing the principles of preventive vigilance to curb corruption, and deepening their understanding of the Right to Information Act, 2005, to promote openness and accountability. Through this holistic approach, the program aims to prepare officers to meet contemporary governance challenges effectively and responsibly.

The program is designed for officers and employees working in Central and State Government departments, Ministries, and Public Sector Undertakings. It is particularly beneficial for those involved in administrative functions, procurement, vigilance, human resource management, and public information services. Senior and middle-level officers responsible for decision-making, implementation of government schemes, or handling RTI matters will find the program especially relevant.

Participants will gain a comprehensive understanding of effective administrative practices, preventive vigilance mechanisms, and transparency measures under the RTI Act.
