RESIDENTIAL TRAINING PROGRAM NEW LABOUR CODES

PROGRAM CODE : T2526GUW04

VENUE : GOA

2ND TO 6TH NOVEMBER 2026

Labour Code Revolution: Simplified Rules, Stronger India

The new Labour Codes are vital for creating a modern, streamlined, and future-ready labour ecosystem in India. Their importance lies in replacing fragmented and archaic laws with a unified framework, which directly addresses long-standing issues of complexity and uncertainty. For the employee, the intended impact is significantly improved welfare and protection, primarily through universalized social security, guaranteed minimum wages, and better occupational safety standards. For the employer, the codes aim to boost ease of doing business by drastically reducing the compliance burden and bureaucratic hurdles associated with 29 different laws.

THE NEW LABOUR CODES

The Government of India has made a historic decision to implement four new Labour Codes—the Code on Wages, 2019, the Industrial Relations Code, 2020, the Code on Social Security, 2020, and the Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions Code, 2020—effective from 21st November 2025. This landmark move rationalizes 29 existing, and often outdated, labour laws that were largely framed in the pre- and early post-Independence era (1930s–1950s).

India's new labour codes—Code on Wages, Industrial Relations Code, Code on Social Security, and Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions Code—consolidate 29 previous laws to create a unified regulatory framework impacting over 50 crore workers. These codes guarantee minimum wages for all segments, equal remuneration irrespective of gender, and periodic wage reviews to support living standards. Significant changes include widespread access to social security schemes (such as provident fund, insurance, and maternity benefits), coverage for gig and platform workers, formal employment procedures, and robust workplace safety guidelines. Dispute resolution will be expedited through streamlined tribunals, and companies will benefit from simplified registration and compliance systems. Together, these reforms aim to boost worker welfare, formalize employment, and enhance ease of doing business, while success depends on effective collaboration and enforcement by central and state governments.

Key Objectives

- ✔ Modernization: Replacing complex, fragmented, and restrictive colonial-era structures with modern, simplified regulations.
- ✔ Worker Welfare: Enhancing protections and social security for workers.
- ✔ Ease of Compliance: Reducing the compliance burden and uncertainty for industries.
- ✔ Future Readiness: Aligning India's labour ecosystem with the evolving world of work and global trends.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Program Goals

This training program shall focus on equipping the participants on the various aspects of the new Labour Codes and its implementation in Organization. This training programme is going to delve into various aspects of the four newly designed codes and its implementation framework.

This comprehensive program is designed to deliver practical, implementation-focused mastery of India's four new Labour Codes—Wages, Industrial Relations, Social Security, and OSH—to ensure complete organizational compliance. Participants will achieve clarity on the new uniform 'Wages' definition for compensation restructuring, learn strategies to navigate revised Industrial Relations rules and dispute management, and understand the mechanisms required to extend social security benefits to unorganized, gig, and platform workers. The training also emphasizes compliance with new Occupational Safety, Health (OSH) standards and the formalization of employment records, ultimately enabling businesses to leverage the new framework for both simplified compliance and enhanced worker welfare and productivity.
